Join One Voice Mixed Chorus for a Transgender Voices Festival on April 13 & 14, 2018 in St. Paul, MN! In partnership with the Macalester College Music Department, the event offers a place for transgender and gender nonconforming singers to explore their voices and identities, grow as artists, and learn tools for voice care. And for those who don't sing there will be opportunities to explore voice in other ways like storytelling, theater, and poetry. The Festival is also a place for voice teachers, music teachers, and choir directors to learn about transgender voice, gain a deeper understanding of trans and gender nonconforming experience, and receive tools to support singers in the classroom and beyond.

The Festival ends each day with evening concerts featuring guest artists from the Festival as well as other transgender singers, poets, and performers the Twin Cities. A chorus of trans and gender nonbinary singers will perform Saturday evening as the culmination of their rehearsals during the Festival. Videos will be produced at the festival to be used as educational tools for transgender singers and voice and music teachers. Continuing education credits will be available to Minnesota teachers and music educators that attend the festival.

National guest artists include singer-songwriter Eli Conley from Berkeley, CA, composer Mari Esabel Valverde from Fort Worth, TX, song leader and music activist Osprey Huffsmith from Eugene, OR, voice teacher and theater artist Wendy Vastine from Pittsburgh, PA, youth choir director André-Louis Heywood from St Cloud, MN, and voice pathologist Erin Donahue from Cincinnati, OH. Local Twin Cities guest artists include conductor and educator Erik Peregrine and speaker and author Alex Iantaffi.

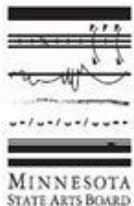

-More-

According to Festival Manager Max Gries, “The world is changing for transgender and gender non-binary people. There is more visibility and with that comes both greater opportunity and challenge. It’s critical for us to have places like the Trans Voices Festival to come together as a community: to sing together, move together, dream, learn, and heal together.”

Registration is on a sliding scale from $0-$100. Financial assistance is available to help cover travel costs for attendees coming from Greater Minnesota. Accessibility is a top priority. Some of the ways One Voice will provide access include a sliding scale registration, a no-scent policy, a quiet room, and venues that are wheelchair accessible, on a bus line, and offer free parking.

Grounded in the values of social justice, gender justice, and inclusivity, the Festival will represent the intersections of identity in our communities including those of race, gender identity and expression, age, dis/ability, and sexual orientation. Trans voices will be centered, both in the audience and as featured guests, teachers, leaders, and workshop presenters. The Festival will provide a learning and supportive space for all, in alignment with the goals of reducing isolation, building community, and creating social change.

Why a transgender voices festival? Voice is incredibly important to transgender and gender nonconforming people. Because transgender voices do not always match societal expectations of outward gender expression, people are often silenced from speaking or singing, out of fear, shame, or humiliation. Transgender singers face many questions about voice: How might my vocal register change if I choose to take hormones? Will I ever sing in the range I really want to? How can I sing in a voice that doesn't match what people expect of my gender expression? Voice teachers also face many questions when working with transgender voices such as fluctuating range, vocal health issues, appropriate repertoire for a transitioning voice and the unique physiology of a changing adult voice.
